It is the story of a Black Villain Cat with a black heart, who sought to steal the little sweetheart of Henry Country Mouse. He engages a gang of tough thugs to do his dirty work, capture Henry, tie him to the rail road tracks, and bring little Lizzie to him safely in a black bag.

The black villain is waiting with his aeroplane and pays the ransom to the thugs then flies away into the great deep blue sky.

Henry, on the railroad tracks, summons up all of his strength and breaks the ropes, succeeds in escaping just before the 10:05 eastbound limited No. 6 speeds swiftly by.

Henry is off quickly to the rescue. He follows for a time by the aid of a fast flying water fowl. When the Black villain shoots down his bird, Henry jumps right into a canoe and paddles so fast that he soon finds himself flying. He comes closer and closer to the villain. Once again the villain cripples his means of travel, but Henry holds on to the canoe paddle and keeps flying.

Then little Lizzie escapes from the bag. A chase around the plane occupies the attention of Blackie, Henry sweeps in, grabs Lizzie and flies away. The villain in his anger destroys the plane and falls to death.

Henry and Lizzie fly down and are married midst boisterous music, proving, "Only the Brave Deserve The Fair."
